CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

INTRODUCTION

SOCIAL MEDIA AND GENERATION Z

The present study investigate about the Significance differences between level of social media usage on the self concept among generation z (those who are born between1997 _2012) .Social media are interactive technologies and digital channels that facilitate the creation and sharing of information, ideas, interests, and other forms of expression through virtual communities and networks. Generation z (those who are born between 1997_2012 also known as Gen z or zoomers) are extremely online. Infact most of these digital native had some kind of social media presence for half their lives.

This social - savvy generation represents a changing tide in social media usage. Sixty – six percent of Gen z consumers state that social media is an essential part of their lives , but their reasoning is unique . The most common reason Gen z uses social media to kill time .As the years pass , Gen z 's social media usage continues to climb . Sixty-five percent of Gen z consumers have increased their use of social media in the last year, and 45% expect it to continue to increase over the next three years. This is and will continue to be a huge trend driver across the social media landscape.

Generation z is the succeeding Millennial and preceding generation Alpha , As the first generation to have grown up with access to the internet and portable digital technology from a young age , members of Generation z have been dubbed “digital native” even though they are not necessarily digitally literate. They more or less , comprise those who grew up deeply connected to technology , practically from the moment they became self aware. Generation z characteristics are interesting and specific; Generation z features avid gamers and music -goers, and they are known for being ever- present messaging on the internet , on social networks, and on mobile systems -they are truly the “Digital – ites ”. they tend to care about trends, but are also quick to research top issues however ,

Generation z is the most at-risk generation for mental illness . The suicide rate for people aged 10 to 24 has increased by 56% between 2007 and 2017 , electronic device play a major role in modern society , touching just about every aspects of our lives and increasing their reach every day . Generation z ,those who born between 1997_2012 ,is unique in that they are the first generation to grow up completely surrounded by technology as a standard way of life with no experience any other way.

SELF CONCEPT

self concept, is the image we have of ourselves . This image develops in a number of ways, including through our interaction with important people in our lives . It is how we perceive our behaviour , abilities , and unique characteristics. For example belief such as “I am a good person ” or “I am a kind person” are part of an overall self concept .

Our self -perception is important because I effects our motivations, attitudes, and behaviours. It also impact how we feel about the person we think we are ,including whether we are competent or if we have self worth. it tends to be more malleable when we're young and still going through the process of self – discovery and identity formation . As we age and learn who we are and what's important to us ,these self -perceptions become much more detailed and organized .

Self-concept develops, in part, through our interaction with others. In addition to family members and close friends, other people in our lives can also contribute to our self-identity.

For instance, one study found that the more a teacher believes in a high-performing student's abilities, the higher that student's self-concept. (Interestingly, no such association was found with lower-performing students.)

Self-concept can also be developed through the stories we hear. As an example, one study found that female readers who were "deeply transported" into a story about a leading character with a traditional gender role had a more feminist self-concept than those who weren't as moved by the story.

The media plays a role in self-concept development as well both mass media and social media. When these media promote certain ideals, we're more likely to make those ideals our own. And the more often these ideals are presented, the more it affects our self-identity and self-perception.

Rogers' Three Parts of Self-Concept

Humanist psychologist Carl Rogers believed that self-concept is made up of three different parts:

- Ideal self: The ideal self is the person you want to be. This person has the attributes or qualities you are either working toward or want to possess. It's who you envision yourself to be if you were exactly as you wanted.
- Self-image: Self-image refers to how you see yourself at this moment in time. Attributes like physical characteristics, personality traits, and social roles all impact your self-image.
- Self-esteem: How much you like, accept, and value yourself all contribute to your self-concept in the form of self-esteem. Self-esteem can be impacted by a number of factors—including how others see you, how you think you compare to others, and your role in society.

SELF CONCEPT THEORIES

Social Identity

Social psychologist Henri Tajfel developed social identity theory, which states that self-concept is composed of two key parts:

- Personal identity: the traits and other characteristics that make you unique
- Social identity: who you are based on your membership in social groups such as sports teams, religions, political parties, or social class

This theory states that our social identity influences our self-concept, thus impacting our emotions and behaviours. If we're playing sports, for instance, and our team loses a game, we might feel sad for the team (emotion) or act out against the winning team (behaviour).

Multiple Dimensions

Psychologist Bruce A. Bracken had a slightly different theory and believed that self-concept was multidimensional, consisting of six independent traits:

- Academic: your success or failure in school
- Affect: your awareness emotional states
- Competence: your ability to meet basic needs
- Family: how well you work in your family unit
- Physical: how you feel about your looks, health, physical condition, and overall appearance
- Social: your ability to interact with others

In 1992, Bracken developed the Multidimensional Self-Concept Scale, a comprehensive assessment that evaluates each of these six elements of self-concept in children and adolescents.

DEFENITION OF KEY TERMS:

SOCIAL MEDIA

Social media are interactive technologies and digital channels that facilitate the creation and sharing of information, ideas, interests, and other forms of expression through virtual communities and networks.

SELF CONCEPT

Self concept is how we perceive our behaviors, abilities, and unique characteristics. Ones self concept is a collection of beliefs about oneself . Generally, self concept embodies the answer to the question “who am i “.

GENERATION Z

Generation z , colloquially also known as zoomers, is the demographic cohort succeeding Millennials and preceding Generation Alpha. People who born in between 1997_2012 are called Generation z.

Mi performance in relation to internet usage peer victimization and self concept among adolescents

Researcher: Preeti Singh

Guide: Sanjeev Kumar

University : Punjab university

Completed year:2018

The study was conducted to delve into the issues of adolescence and how they impact the academic performance of the adolescents. The myriad shifts in development and social contexts are of a great tantamount in this age. Keeping in mind that in this age where and adolescent is handling many physiological and psychological changes, acceptance of self and by peers, internet usage, peer victimization all have a major role to play. The literature testified the same. The study was confined to the adolescents of XI and XII of the private schools of Dehradun. For conducting the study the tools of internet usage and self-concept which were made by the investigator and the self-concept inventory of Saraswat were used. Before the analysis of the data, it was put for analysing the normal distribution. It was found in the data that in some instances it deviated from the normal distribution but because the deviation was not very severe so the parametric tests were used. The data was analysed using mean, SD, t-test. Further to see the relationship among the three variables simple and multiple correlation were used. The data was put into computation for its normality. It was conducted to see as to how peer victimization, self-concept and internet usage contribute to the Academic performance. The study also attempted to study the multiple correlation between the dependent variable Academic performance and independent variable. Also mean scores of peer victimization, internet usage and self-concept of male and female adolescents were computed. The study found out positive significant correlation between peer victimization and internet usage. A similar result was seen in case of self-concept and academic performance, they were positively significantly correlated. However, peer victimization and self-concept were negatively significantly correlated, peer victimization and academic performance were negatively significantly correlated, self-concept and internet usage were negatively significantly correlated and academic performance and internet usage were negatively significantly correlated. The results showed that as one increases the other decreases. On calculating the mean scores however, no difference in the mean scores of peer victimization, self-concept, internet usage and academic performance of the male and female adolescents were seen

Social maturity self concept loneliness Depression and technostress among smartphone users.

Researcher:Hemlata

Guide: Singh, Shalini

University : Maharshi Dayanand University

Completed date:2020

To study the relationship between Social maturity, Self-concept, Loneliness, Depression and Techno-stress among Smartphone users. The study was conducted on late age adolescent's i.e.15 to 18 years (Marie, 1999). The research was carried out on 300 adolescents (N=300) divided in two equal groups of smart phone users (150) and non-users (150). All these participants were studying in different private schools of Haryana and belong to middle socio economic status layer.

Test used are 1. Rao Social Maturity Scale (RSMS) (Dr. Nalini Rao,1986) 2. Self -Concept Scale (Dr. Mukta rani Rastogi,1979)3. UCLA Loneliness Scale (Russell, Peplau and Cutrona, 1980; Russell, Peplau & Ferguson, 1978) 4. 6-ITEM Kutcher Adolescent Depression Scale: KADS (LeBlanc, Almudevar, Brooks and Kutcher, 2002) 5. Techno Stress Scale (Tarafdar, Tu, Ragu-Nathan & Ragu-Nathan,2007.)

To statistically analyse the obtained data various statistical techniques were used the results of which have been given in the following sections: Section I : Descriptive Statistics (Mean, S.D.) ,Section II : Inter-correlation (Pearson's Product Moment Coefficient) Section III : T-test

During the research, it was found that self concept was negatively correlated with loneliness which has a clear meaning that positive attitude toward self is an important factor for adolescents. In addition, it was also found that self concept is significantly related to social maturity also. This finding supports the importance of role of self concept in early ages. Furthermore, self concept acts like a buffer for depression because it has been found to negatively related with depression. On the basis of the present research findings, it is strongly recommended that there should be focus on developing positive self concept among adolescents. As this is the task related to early age hence there should be training of parents and teachers so that kids can achieve their full potential. Because it is the attitude towards self which further affects the social maturity, which is an important aspect of social relationships. Adolescents should be make aware about use of technology for purposeful tasks only and it should be done before they became addicted to smart phones.

. Personality self esteem and social identity of mobile phone users

Researcher:Deepti rani

Guide:Arunima gupta

University: Maharshi Dayanand University

Completed date:2017

To study the personality, self esteem and social identity of mobile phone user. A multiple group design was applied for the present research. A three group design was used to study and compare personality, self esteem and social identity of mobile phone users who were in the usage categories of low, moderate and high. The independent variables include three groups of mobile phone users i.e. low, moderate and high and dependent variables contain personality, self esteem and social identity. purposive sample of 600 respondents in the age range of 21-40 years at least graduate using mobile phones of both males and females was selected on the basis of their availability. The present sample was drawn from Haryana state as well as from the neighbouring states of Haryana. Out of 600 respondents every effort was made to select 300 with at least 100 respondents in each of the three groups i.e. low, moderate and high mobile phone users. The first hypothesis which proposed that there would be significant difference among low, moderate and high mobile phone users on personality has partially been verified. i) The significant difference was evident among low, moderate and high mobile phone users on neuroticism. ii) The significant difference was evident among low, moderate and high mobile phone users on extraversion. iii) No significant difference was evident on the other three dimensions of personality i.e. openness to experience, agreeableness and conscientiousness.

The study also confirmed the significant difference on account of self esteem of mobile phone users among low, moderate and high mobile phone users. Therefore the second hypothesis was also verified.

Influence Of Social Media On Personality And Mental Health Of University Students.

Researcher: RAJESH R

Guide: ASGARALI PATEL J.M

University: ANNAMALAI UNIVERSITY

Completed date :2018.

This research study was an attempt made to explore the influence of Social media more explicitly, Facebook on the personality, mental health, and self-esteem among the students of Annamalai University (the largest residential University in Asia). The sample-size for the research comprised of 500 participants from five different faculties of Annamalai University. Stratified random sampling technique was used to select the samples. The tools used for data collection were standardized measures selected after a comprehensive review of related literature, specifically, (1) the Facebook Intensity Scale (Ellison, Stein field and Lampe, 2007), (2) the Big Five Inventory (Benet-Martinez & John, 1998), (3) the Mental Health Scale (Kamlesh Sharma, 2002), (4) the Self Esteem Scale (Rosenberg, M, 1965) and (5) the Personal Information Schedule designed by the researcher. Data collection was approximately spread over duration of six months. Mean, standard deviation, t-test, analysis of variance (ANOVA), correlation and regression analysis. Results indicated that three personality factors, namely, extroversion, agreeableness to openness to new experience were significantly and positively related to use of Facebook were as conscientiousness and neuroticism were not significantly connected to Facebook intensity. Besides, Facebook usage was negatively correlated with mental health and self esteem. It was also observed that University students differ significantly in Facebook usage on the basis of age, education, Faculty of study, income, duration of Facebook usage and purpose of Facebook use.

Academic Commitment in relation to Social Media Usage Social Maturity and Emotional Maturity among College Students

Researcher: JEEVAN PRAKASH M

Guide: ENOK JOYEL T

University: BHARTHIAR UNIVERSITY

Completed date :2019

The study was carried out to find out the College Students' Academic Commitment in relation to their Social media usage, Social and Emotional Maturity, which was conducted in the Tiruppur District of Tamil Nadu, India. 804 College students of 5-Arts & Science Colleges, 4-Engineering Colleges and 7-College of Education in Tiruppur District were taken into account.

The present investigation was undertaken by using normative survey method. The random sampling technique has been employed for the selection of the sample. The dependent variable is College Students' Academic Commitment, and the independent variables are Social media usage, Social Maturity and Emotional Maturity. College Students' Social media usage scale constructed and validated by investigator and the research supervisor(2018), Academic Commitment Scale (ACS), developed by Salomé Human-Vogel and Piet Rabe (2015), "Social Maturity Scale" constructed and standardized by Nalini Rao (1986) and "Emotional Maturity Scale" constructed and standardized by Senthuran D (2016) have been used for this study.

Findings indicate that students do not differentiate between technology and social media, and that they rely heavily on social media to facilitate their academic success. This case study indicates that while using social media extensively may create minor issues for students, proper use can support academic endeavours.

Social media usage its relationship with psychological distress self esteem and family functioning among college going youth.

Researcher: CHOUDHRY MARIA

Guide: ALI, ARIF

University: GUAHATI UNIVERSITY.

Completed date :2020

This study aimed to assess the prevalence of social media addiction, and its relation with self-esteem, psychological distress, and general family functioning among the college-going youth in Guwahati city, Assam. The study used a quantitative research approach. A cross-sectional correlational research study design was used to find social media usage and its relationship with psychological distress, self-esteem and family functioning. A sample of 600 participants from six different colleges of Guwahati city was selected (using a sample calculator at 95% confidence level and class interval of 4). Participants with both the gender, pursuing graduation from colleges affiliated to Gauhati University in regular mode of education were included in the study. The participants who did not give consent were excluded.

To get the background information of the participants, a semi-structured interview schedule was used. Bergen social media addiction scale (BSMAS) was used to see the prevalence of social media addiction, Rosenberg self-esteem scale (RES) was used to see the self-esteem of the participants, depression, anxiety, and stress scale (DASS 21) was used to see the prevalence of psychological distress and general functioning subscale from family assessment device (FAD) was used to see the family functioning of the college-going youth. The data were analysed using the statistical package of the social sciences (SPSS) version 25.

The present study gives a picture of the engrossment with social media among the college-going youth of Guwahati. Most of the obvious reason to use social media is to communicate, avoid face to face communication, as a source of entertainment, refreshment, academic purposes, etc. Social media addiction has a correlation with self-esteem, psychological distress (depression, anxiety, and stress) and family functioning. Self-esteem, psychological distress and family functioning were found to be predictors of social media addiction. The excess usage of social media by college-going youth can lead to social media addiction and can have an impact on their self-esteem, psychological wellbeing and family functioning.

Impact of Networking Sites in College Students A Sociological Study of Kolhapur District.

Researcher: Gheji Vijay Kallappa

Guide : Mane, Shailaja k

University: Shivaji University

Completed Date: 16/06/2017

The study was aimed at understanding the impact of social networking sites on college students. In this research selected respondents are the users of social media. All belong to various colleges from Kolhapur District. The design which is used in the study was an explorative study. snow ball sampling method was adopted. A sample of 360 college students for gathering primary data.

The respondents came from 12 colleges from 12 taluks in Kolhapur District. The respondents are currently studying in different faculties i.e. Arts, Commerce and Science.

The major finding was Majority of the respondents are involved in using android phones, therefore they are unable to give more time for study, It is clear that maximum use of android phones results in a disturbance of college study, majority of the respondents are using android and smartphones in this they are connected with Facebook and WhatsApp, the majority of the respondents of are using smartphones and android phones, there are more costly in the market, This study indicates that majority of the respondents strongly agree with the statement of getting current events /affairs by the use of social networking sites.

Psycho social correlates of internet usage among university students

Researcher: bhodhi,vishakha

Guide:jagpreet kaur

University :Punjab university

Completed date:2018

The aim of the study was to examine the effect of psycho-social correlates of internet usage among university students. A descriptive design with quantitative approach was used to collect data from a stratified random sample of 600 postgraduate university students pursuing different streams of study viz. social-science, science and professional from the three state universities of Punjab namely Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar, Punjabi university, Patiala and Panjab University, Chandigarh. The data was collected using the self-constructed tools; a questionnaire to elicit demographic data, internet usage scale, scale for face-to-face interaction with parents, scale for face-to-face interaction with peer group, depression, anxiety and stress (DASS) scale, self-efficacy scale and socio-economic status scale. The results of the study revealed that the majority of the university students were found to have an above average level of internet usage. Further, significant gender differences were found in internet usage for social purpose among university students. Male university students were significantly high on internet usage for social purpose than female students. There were significant stream-wise differences in internet usage among university students. The students belonging to professional stream were found to have significantly higher internet usage for educational purpose than social-science and science university students. The results of the correlational analysis showed a significant and positive relationship of internet usage for educational purpose with academic achievement of university students. A positive and significant relationship of internet usage with depression, stress and socio-economic status was found in university students. Internet usage for educational purpose was significantly and positively related with self-efficacy among university students. Further, the internet usage had no significant relationship with anxiety, face-to-face interaction with parents and face-to-face interaction with peer group among university students. Socio-economic status and depression were found the most significant predictors of internet usage of university students.

Children's attitude towards television advertisements and their impact on family purchase decisions

Researcher: Khanna, Priyaka

Guide:singla,BB

University: Punjab university

Completed date:2013

The study was an attempt to investigate children purchase request affected by television advertisements. The main objective of the study are to assess the children attitude towards television advertisements taking a sample of rural and urban children , to measure the ability of television advertisements to influence family purchases with regard to various product categories and to analyses the parent's perception of influence of television advertisements on their children. The result indicated that children from both the domicile has overall positive attitude towards television advertisements considering them as important source of product information and enjoyment, though to some extent they do consider television advertisement to be manipulative and Irrelative. A significant number of children from both the domicile indicated that their purchase request is majority of time influence by television advertisements. The result added to the body of evidence supporting the notion of ‘reverse socialization’ (where parents learn from children) stating that children are active influencers in the purchase of some high involvement products in the family like mobile phones, computers, cars, video players etc., besides having more influence in the purchase of less expensive products and those for their own use. For majority of product categories weak positive correlation was reported indicating that children perceive themselves as exerting greater level of influence than their parents perceived them to have. Television advertisements have more effect on urban families’ budget as compared to rural families. Parents’ from both the domicile perceive that TV ads help in economic socialization process of children by providing them relevant knowledge about brands and products, but showed a great concern about junk food ads and do believe that ads are reason for family conflict as it increase ‘nag factor’ and also generates materialistic values among children. Age, gender, education level, parents’ income, family type which do effect children involvement in family purchase decisions were not measured in the study. The result overall indicated that television advertisement are the main source for development of Indian children consumer socialization and parents and children usually work together in family decision making .

Marketers must address the needs of both partners and work to help any conflict that may arise.

A Study of well being among teenagers in relation to social media.

Researcher: Joshi , Neelim

Guide : vijayalaxmi chouhan

University: Mohan Lal Sukhadi University

Completed year: 2019

This study made its effort to analyse significance of gender and social media addiction status on psychological health aspects including well-being, emotional expression, death anxiety, body image and psychological counselling need for teenagers. The present study further extended to develop cognitive-behaviour therapeutic module (CBTM) for social media addiction and to ascertain the significance of this module on social media addiction and its alienated psychological health aspects. Sample of 120 respondents from Udaipur city of Rajasthan who were involved excessively in social media activities were selected through Purposive sampling technique for this study. Cognitive behavioural therapeutic Module (CBTM) was developed as therapeutic intervention for social media addict teenagers. Tests and scales employed were; Social Media Addiction Checklist (SMAC), Well Being Index (WBI), Emotional Expression Scale (EES), Death anxiety Scale (DAS), Body Image Scale (BIS) and Psychological counselling needs scale (PCNS). To accomplish the objectives between (2X2 factorial independent group) and Within (Pre-Post single group) group design were employed. Obtained data was dealt under 2X2 way analysis of variance (ANOVA) and t-test analysis. Result revealed that gender difference as significant only for emotional expression and body image. While analysed social media addiction status, social media addict group was found with significantly higher in level of death anxiety, psychological counselling need, inappropriate emotional expression, unfavourable body image and poorer level of well-being as compare to social media non-addict group. Apart for emotional expression the interactive role for both factors i.e. Gender and social media addiction status was endorsed as insignificant for all psychological measures. Furthermore CBTM is analysed as significant intervention approach to reduce social media addiction and its resultant negative outcomes on well-being, emotional expression, death anxiety, body image and psychological counselling need for teenagers.

CHAPTER III

METHODOLOGY

AIM

The present study is entitled as “IMPACT OF SOCIAL MEDIA USAGE ON SELF CONCEPT AMONG GENERATION Z”

OBJECTIVES

1. To find out the relationship between level of social media usage and self concept among Generation z.
2. To find out if there is any significant difference in self concept among high level of social media users and low level of social media users among Generation z.

HYPOTHESIS

1. There will be no significant difference in self-concept among high level and low level of social media usage among Generation z.

SAMPLE SELECTION

The present study is concerned with the Generation z. The people from Generation z age between 10 to 25 with 39 high level of social media users and 39 low level of social media users were taken to constitute the population. The total size of the sample is 78.

INCLUSION CRITERIA:

In this study we have included high level of social media users and low level of social media users , people who belong to Generation z category, people who have mobile phones , The people who have social media accounts , People those who are using social media for more than 1 year and having all the time access to social media.

EXCLUSION CRITERIA:

In this study we excluded the people who don't have social media accounts, people those who are not able to use social media willingly, people who have addiction and either psychological disturbances, people who don't belong to Generation z category.

TOOL

The data was collected using Robson self concept questionnaire, which was administered through online using Google form were informed consent taken and confidentially was assured , Data was analyzed with descriptive statistics using SPSS Version.

ROBSON SELF CONCEPT SCALE

The self concept Questionnaire (SCQ) designed and standardized by Robson was used for the research study. The SCQ is a self_report scale measuring self esteem (Robson 1989) . It consists of 30 items (e.g “ I have control over my life” , “ I feel emotionally matruer” .This questionnaire deals with attitude and belief which some people had about themselves. The item are based on seven components of self esteem according to therotical and emperical information reviewed by Robson (1988). Contemned and worthiness, Attractivness, approval by others , determinism and significance, confidence and value of existence and reseliencie. The items are scored on an eight point scale ranging from 0(completely disagree) to 7(completely agree).The individual is asked to how much they agree or disagree with each statement ,according to how they typically feel. A highscore represents high self esteem with 140 considered normal mean with a standard deviation of 20.

RELIABILITY AND VALIDITY

The SCQ has proven to have a good Reliability (from bah's Alpha of .89) and good validity (clinical validity of .70) the questionnaire was converted into Google form and administered to the participants via internet.

Robson SCQ

This questionnaire deals with attitudes and beliefs which some people have about themselves.

Since people vary so much in the opinions they hold, there are no right or wrong answers.

SCORING

Some items are scored as printed, others are reversed.

- The 14 ‘normal’ items (Qu 1, 2, 3, 6, 9, 10, 12, 15, 16, 18, 24, 26, 29, 30) have a full stop after the question number (e.g. 2.) — scoring for these is taken straight off the scale as printed.
- The 16 ‘reversed’ items (Qu 4, 5, 7, 8, 11, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 25, 27, 28) have a colon after the question number (e.g. 4:) — scoring is reversed for these (i.e. 0 = 7, 1 = 6 etc).
- Add up the numbers obtained like this to get the total score.

PROCEDURE

Participants were provided with the test to the survey as a research was administrated through online , where the questionnaire were made available through Google forms. At the beginning of the questionnaire participants were informed that the purpose of research was to collect data on self-concept. Each participant s was given the informed consent and assured that all information provided will be kept confidential .following the consent, participants were instructed to answer the questions to the best of their ability with the most appropriate or accurate answer.

A total of 78 individuals took part in this study the participants were selected through convenience sampling method and Google form made accessible to them . The participations were contected through online and were conveyed the purpose of the study. The questionnaire were then scored . The result obtained are then statistically analysed using statistic package for the social science (SPSS) and interpreter.

STATISTICAL ANALYSIS:

The data is analysed using statistic package of social sciences. The scores are analysed individually , t test Karl Pearson correlation coefficient used to interpret data, the data were analysed following test statistically.

- a.Discriptive statistics
- b.independent test
- c.karl Pearson correlation coefficient

DISCRIPTIVE STATISTICS

Such as frequencies and percentage mean and standard deviation have been collected using statistical package for social science research in order to describe the demographic and psychological profile of the participants.

INDEPENDENT t TEST: This is a statistical test appropriate for judging the significance of difference between means of two samples (Garette, 1969). The t-test is based on t distributions. If the calculated 't' value exceeds the cut-off point (depending on the degrees of freedom) the difference between means is considered significant. When the t-value is below the critical value, the difference is not significant. Very often a researcher encounters a problem of comparing two groups of a continuous outcome. This is to test whether on average, one group is significantly higher or lower than the other. In this case the independent t test is used. The t-test is based on t distributions. The independent t-test, also called the two-sample t-test, independent-samples t-test or student's t-test, is an inferential statistical test that determines whether there is a statistically significant difference between the means in two unrelated groups. In this case the null hypothesis is $H_0: \mu_1 = \mu_2$ and alternate hypotheses are $H_1: \mu_1 > \mu_2, \mu_1 < \mu_2$.

KARL PEARSON'S CORRELATION COEFFICIENT: Correlation is a statistical tool to find the strength and direction of relationship between two quantitative variables. When two variables move in such a manner that change in one variable is followed by the change in the other variable, we say that they are correlated. The coefficient of correlation proposed by Karl Pearson measures the direction and magnitude of linear relation between x and y. Since it is a coefficient, it is independent of the unit of measurement of items. And it lies between -1 and +1, stronger the relation between x and y closer the value of coefficient to -1 or +1. And weaker when it approaches zero. Pearson's 'r' was employed in the present study to estimate the inter-relationships among different variables.. The significance of the obtained 'r' was compared with the limits established using the standard error of 'r' which is calculated for 0.1%, 1% and 5% level. The product moment correlation between any two variables can be described in a general way as high, marked or substantial, or low or negligible. Garrett (1969) presents the following classification for interpreting the various values of r's.

CHAPTER IV

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

RESULT

This chapter represents the result reached through statistical analysis of collected data . Analysis is the key of any research work. And it's is the way to test hypothesis formulated by the investigator . The different statistical analysis carried out in the study can bring some definite results.

Table 1: Mean , SD ,t values and p values on self concept based on social media usage , variables	number	High level of social media usage Category1		Low level of social media usage Category 2		t	p

		mean	SD	mean	SD
Self concept	78	119.51	24.71	118.41	23.53	.305	.761

Table 1 shows Mean , SD ,t values and p values on self concept based on social media usage among generation z people. The mean of high social media using is 119.59(SD : 24.71) and the mean value of low social media using is 118.41 (SD : 23.53) the t value of self concept .305 (p value .761) at the level of significance $p < 0.001$ which is statistically not significant.

In the present study the topic was selected taking account the fact that social media is an important part of generation z . The present study was investigating about the impact of social media usage in the self concept of generation z (those who are born between 1997 _2012) .Social media are interactive technologies and digital channels that facilitate the creation and sharing of information, ideas, interests, and other forms of expression through virtual communities and networks. Generation z (those who are born between 1997_2012 also known as Gen z or zoomers) are extremely online. Infact most of these digital native had some kind of social media presence for half their lives and also Generation z is the most at-risk generation for mental illness . The suicide rate for people aged 10 to 24 has increased by 56% between 2007 and 2017 , electronic device play a major role in modern society , touching just about every aspects of our lives and increasing their reach every day . Generation z ,those who born between 1997_2012 ,is unique in that they are the first generation to grow up completely surrounded by technology as a standard way of life with no experience any other way.

Based on the result its proven the self-concept is influenced by the new age technologies used for human interaction. But its not only influenced by such platform there is many other factors influence to Develop self concept. In the result there was not shown any significance, may be this age of life is very involved with gadgets and technology. So it's clear that we trust much more in the technology and depends on it for our daily life.

Generation z is such population who are very much involved in technology. They have grown up with such influence in all area of their life. But here in this study its proven that there is no significance based on the usage. So we may have to use another perception where to find out the involvement of social media in a person's development. Especially the emotion and personality development.à1

CHAPTER V
SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

The present study was based on the level of social media usage and self-concept in individuals , where the result of the study showed that self concept has no connection with the level of social media usage and self concept.

The main objective of this study was to find out if there is any significant differences in self-concept among high level and low level of social media usage among Generation z. For this research study we selected the variable self-concept , self concept, is the image we have of ourselves . This image develops in a number of ways, including through our interaction with important people in our lives . It is how we perceive our behaviour , abilities , and unique characteristics. For example belief such as “I am a good person ” or “I am a kind person” are part of an overall self concept .

Our self -perception is important because I effects our motivations, attitudes, and behaviours. It also impact how we feel about the person we think we are ,including whether we are competent or if we have self worth. it tends to be more malleable when we're young and still going through the process of self – discovery and identity formation . As we age and learn who we are and what's important to us ,these self -perceptions become much more detailed and organized .

Self-concept develops, in part, through our interaction with others. In addition to family members and close friends, other people in our lives can also contribute to our self-identity.

For instance, one study found that the more a teacher believes in a high-performing student's abilities, the higher that student's self-concept. (Interestingly, no such association was found with lower-performing students.)

Self-concept can also be developed through the stories we hear. As an example, one study found that female readers who were "deeply transported" into a story about a leading character with a traditional gender role had a more feminist self-concept than those who weren't as moved by the story.

The media plays a role in self-concept development as well both mass media and social media. When these media promote certain ideals, we're more likely to make those ideals our own. And the more often these ideals are presented, the more it affects our self-identity and self-perception .the population was selected using year of birth profiling the selected population was from Generation z (those who are born between1997 _2012) Generation z is the succeeding Millennial and preceding generation Alpha , As the first generation to have grown up with access to the internet and portable digital technology from a young age , members of Generation z have been dubbed “digital native” even though they are not necessarily digitally literate. They more or less , comprise those who grew up deeply connected to technology , practically from the moment they became self aware.

For this study the scale used was Robson self concept scale the self concept Questionnaire (SCQ) designed and standardized by Robson was used for the research study. The SCQ is a self_report scale measuring self esteem (Robson 1989) . It consists of 30 items (e.g “ I have control over my life” , “ I feel emotionally mature” .This questionnaire deals with attitude and belief which some people had about themselves. The items are based on seven components of self esteem according to theoretical and empirical information reviewed by Robson (1988). Contempt and worthiness, Attractiveness, approval by others , determinism and significance, confidence and value of existence and resilience. The items are scored on an eight point scale ranging from 0(completely disagree) to 7(completely agree).The individual is asked to how much they agree or disagree with each statement ,according to how they typically feel. A high score represents high self esteem with 140 considered normal mean with a standard deviation of 20.

The participants of the study consisted of 78 individuals who were belong to Generation z of age 10 to 25. 39 individuals of high level of social media users and 39 individuals of low level of social media users were taken to constitute the population.

The study was conducted through online,Participants were provided with the test to the survey as a research was administrated through online , where the questionnaire were made available through Google forms. A total of 78 individuals took part in this study the participants were selected through convenience sampling method and Google form made accessible to them . The questionnaire were then scored . The result obtained are then statistically analysed using statistic package for the social science (SPSS) and interpreted .

The data is analysed using statistic package of social sciences. The scores are analysed individually , t test Karl Pearson correlation coefficient used to interpret data, the data were analysed following test statistically , Descriptive statistics , independent test , Karl Pearson correlation coefficient.

MAJOR FINDINGS OF THE STUDY:

- There is no significant differences between level of social media usage and self concept among Generation z.

TENABILITY OF THE HYPOTHESIS:

There will be no significant difference in self-concept among high level and low level of social media usage among Generation z. the result of the study showed that self concept has no connection with the level of social media usage and self concept. Hence the alternative hypothesis was accepted

LIMITATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS:

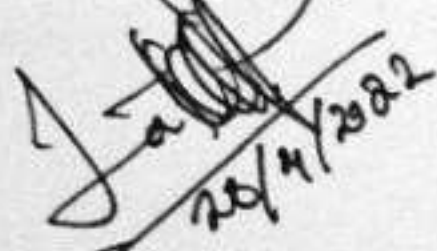

- Only one variable are taken for study . Adding of more variables may give new results .
- Population taken was small in size. Taken only one geographical area of Kerala State .
- Data was collected by online survey. It could have been better if directly data was collected.
